Harbor-UCLA Department of Medicine Grand Rounds

Overview

To improve competence and clinical performance of physicians within the medical center and the surrounding community in ways that promote optimal patient care and outcomes. Towards this end the Department supports educational activities designed to maintain and improve physicians’ knowledge of best clinical practices and the evidence on which they are based, and competence in applying these to clinical decision-making. These activities may include regularly scheduled conferences addressing current, new and evolving information for optimizing physician behaviors and practice across the range of internal medicine disciplines. In addition, faculty of the Department with unique expertise in specialized areas of practice may offer occasional educational activities focused on practice gaps related to these specific areas.
