Autism Through the Lifespan

Friday, April 26, 2024

Tamkin Auditorium
Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center
Los Angeles, California

UCLA
CART

Course Description

This annual symposium, now hybrid, is designed for all those interested in learning about the latest breakthroughs in research and treatment in autism spectrum disorder (ASD), including health care providers, teachers, autism service providers, and families. Nationally renowned UCLA Center for Autism Research and Treatment (CART) faculty and guest speaker will present the most up-to-date information about ASD.

On Friday, April 26, 2024, symposium speakers will present the latest updates on ASD and we cordially invite you to engage with these dynamic speakers and actively participate in live discussions and Q&A sessions featuring esteemed panelists. Themed around autism across the lifespan, the symposium will cover a variety of topics, including the genetics of autism, early interventions for autistic children and their families, motor function during early life, the role of the brain in sensory regulation during adolescence, connectivity of the brain during adolescence, aging and autism from longitudinal studies, evidence-based interventions during adulthood, and a family perspective on caring for autistic adults. To qualify for the 6.00 CME credits for participation in this activity, participants will be required to attend the April 26 live event.

Course Objectives

At the end of the course, learners will be able to:

- Hear a family advocate's perspective in caring for autistic siblings
- Describe the latest updates in autism genetics
- Inform families on early intervention for autistic children
- Examine motor function for autistic children during early life
- Explain the brain's role in sensory regulation during adolescence
- Examine connectivity of the brain during adolescence
- Interpret Aging in Autism from longitudinal studies
- Review evidence-based interventions for adults to improve social outcomes

Target Audience

This annual symposium, which this year will include both live and recorded presentations, is designed for all those interested in learning about the latest breakthroughs in research and treatment in autism spectrum disorder (ASD), including health care providers, teachers, autism service providers, self-advocates and families.

Accreditation

The David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA is accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education to provide continuing medical education for physicians.

The David Geffen School of Medicine at UCLA designates this live activity for a maximum of 7.50 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™]. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

The California State Board of Registered Nursing accepts courses approved for the AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™] as meeting the continuing education requirements for license renewal. Nurses from states other than California should inquire with their local State Board for specific continuing education policies.

Disclosure Statement

The FDA has issued a concept paper that classifies commercial support of scientific and educational programs as promotional unless it can be affirmed that the program is “truly independent” and free of commercial influence. In addition to independence, the FDA requires that non-promotional, commercially supported education be objective, balanced, and scientifically rigorous. The policy further states that all potential conflicts of interest of the CME staff and faculty be fully disclosed to the program’s participants. In addition, Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education policy mandates that the sponsor adequately manage all identified potential conflicts of interest prior to the program. We, at UCLA, fully endorse the letter and spirit of these concepts.
