COURSE DESCRIPTION

This four-day intensive virtual and in-person program, aimed at ophthalmologists and trainees, will review the clinical essentials of each subspecialty in ophthalmology. It will be a clinically oriented review concentrating on the epidemiology, clinical presentation, diagnosis, and management of ophthalmologic disease; and will help prepare course participants for OKAPS, ABO, and maintenance recertification examinations. The course will cover the important clinical principles of ophthalmology and update any changes to traditional clinical protocols. It will be a review of the accepted clinical practice and will not cover research-related topics. Basic scientific mechanisms and research therapies will not be covered.

OBJECTIVES:

At the conclusion of this course, learners will be able to:

- Identify recommended time points for retinopathy of prematurity surveillance
- Familiarize with different types and causes of pediatric cataracts and timing of cataract surgery
- Identify location of central pathology based on visual field patterns
- Familiarize with different corneal dystrophies and corresponding pattern of inheritance
- Understand the indications for for endothelial keratoplasty vs. penetrating keratoplasty and common complications of each
- Recognize the indications and contraindications of implanting multifocal intraocular lenses
- Identify the available minimally invasive glaucoma devices and the indications and potential complications of each
- Recognize concerning features of choroidal lesions
- Differentiate between different white dot syndromes
- Describe eyelid anatomy by listing each layer from superficial to deep

DISCLOSURE

The FDA has issued a concept paper which classifies commercial support of scientific and educational programs as promotional unless it can be affirmed that the program is “truly independent” and free of commercial influence. In addition to independence, the FDA requires that non-promotional, commercially supported education be objective, balanced, and scientifically rigorous. The policy further states that all potential conflicts of interest of the CME staff and faculty be fully disclosed to the program’s participants. In addition, policy of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education mandates that the provider adequately manages all identified potential conflicts of interest prior to the program. We, at UCLA fully endorse the letter and spirit of these concepts.
